CLINICAL APPLICATION OF COMPRESSION PUMPS – WHICH PRODUCTS, WHEN?

Compression pumps are an established treatment modality for lymphoedema. They can also be utilised safely to treat complicated mixed aetiology where arterial, venous and lymphatic pathologies may also be present. It can be confusing to decide which device and garments to use when.

This year, we have introduced a larger range of pumps and garments to treat these conditions optimally so this session will explain the when and why of new and flagship Medi-Rent products.

Our local staff will provide an introduction and hands on experience with the product range. Clinical advisor, Jen Sanderson, will be available via live webinar during the workshop to provide guidance on the decision-making process as it relates to certain clinical presentations. She will provide insights from her clinical experience as well as findings from research and case studies where applicable.

A light supper will be served.
